

Eric Fok Hoi Seng nasceu no final da era Portuguesa em Macau, onde uma pequena cidade do oriente se encontra com a cultura ocidental. Inspirando-se na delicada relação entre Portugal e Macau, Fok cria um novo conjunto de desenhos durante a sua estadia em Lisboa.

Eric Fok imaginou Zheng - He (um grande navegador chinês do século XIV) e a sua frota a chegarem a Lisboa, a porem os pés em terra na Torre de Belém. Talvez eles gostassem como a maioria dos viajantes de descobrir uma cidade em que nunca estiveram, apanhando o 28 da Carris e desfrutar de um pastel de nata. E até construírem alguma arquitetura tradicional chinesa em Lisboa. Como seria esta cidade se a cultura oriental tivesse desembarcado em Lisboa no século XVI?

Eric Fok Hoi Seng was born in the late era of Portuguese Macau, where a small town with east meets west culture. Being inspired by the delicate relationship between Portugal and Macau, Fok creates a new set of drawing during his stay in Lisbon.

Eric Fok imagined Zheng-He (a Chinese great voyager and marina in the 14th century) and his fleet arrived in Lisbon, and got ashore at the Belem Tower. Maybe they would like most of the travelers travel around a city they have never been, taking Carris 28 to enjoy a Portuguese egg tart. And even built some traditional Chinese architecture in Lisbon, how would this city be if the oriental culture landed in 16th century?
